Vedic astrology (Jyotish) is one of the oldest in the world. It was revealed to the ancient enlightened rishis who explored the universe through their consciousness in deep meditation during the Golden Age on earth (Satya Yuga). As it is divinely inspired and connected to the timeless space of Being, it is still relevant today and touches our soul directly.

Similarities with Western astrology:

- it has the same planets, signs and houses. There are also aspects, but these are slightly different.

Here's how it differs from Western astrology:

- it's sidereal astrology, which considers the astronomical phenomenon of the precession of the equinoxes. It therefore corresponds to the true positions of the constellations in the sky. This means that your sign, ascendant, etc. may change
- the dashas (planetary periods), which indicate the major cycles in our lives that are personal to each of us
- the nakshatras (27 lunar signs), for a more in-depth interpretation and to find out which Vedic deities have the greatest influence on us
- the vargas (harmonic charts), to go further in a specific area (career, health...)
- the upayes (corrective remedies) to strengthen the planets with the help of the corresponding stones, foods, herbs, colors, yantras and mantras, and so improve the corresponding area of our lives.
